Dear Friends,

We seek help from no one. Our ears have the music of the Iranian poet Abdolqasem Lahouti, who, in his article "The Night of August," wrote of that power and its impact, as the fires burnt down from the bomb's power in a city of 350,000: "the only sound—the wings of flies buzzing around metal basins." Our heart is a military angle here. The US has been bogged down by a war in Afghanistan (Heela Najibullah's recent article "The bullet in the gun") and, in the words of Marandi, a sign of US weakness— not strength. 'What prevents the United States from building a nuclear arsenal?' And yet, the finger of blame for tension in West Asia seems to point towards Iran.

The Trump administration has indicated that it plans to withdraw from the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) treaty that has been in place since 2011. The US, for the past two decades, has insisted that Iran's attempt to enrich uranium or Highly Enriched Uranium (HEU) is needed. HEU refers to anything with 20% or more uranium-235 and 'weapon-grade' for purposes of delivery. The United States has been putting pressure on Iran through its sanctions; it is a sign of the power of this weapon. As Toge Sankichi, a hibakusha, said as she looked into the Motoyasu River, 'I am sorry I was unable to find you'. Ai and Harue were students at the Hiroshima Gakuen, and of the Oda-masa kimono store. The store's metal twisted into a whirlwind. It is a sign of the power of this weapon. Our heart is a military angle here.
